

Litigation

HCMP trial lawyers are creative and effective problem solvers.

The lawyers in our Litigation Group are skilled advocates who practice in all areas of dispute resolution, including trial and appellate litigation, arbitration, mediation, and regulatory proceedings. Ours is a problem-solving approach. Through careful analysis and planning at the outset of a case, we advise our clients of the potential benefits and risks presented by various courses of action. Our objective in each case is to identify the best means of achieving our client's goals, and to be forceful advocates of our client's interests.

HCMP trial lawyers have expertise in litigating cases involving corporate and business matters, employment law, creditors' rights and bankruptcy, unfair trade practices, securities, product liability, toxic torts, intellectual property, eminent domain and inverse condemnation, and land use and real estate. We have considerable experience in the management of complex cases. We use state-of-the-art computer litigation support to manage large volumes of documents and testimony. Our litigation staff includes experienced legal assistants who perform investigative research, document review, indexing, and other tasks.

At HCMP, we maintain the cost effectiveness of our representation through efficient staffing of lawyers working on particular matters, and appropriate use of paralegals and technology. We believe that our problem-solving approach to litigation has produced outstanding results over the years for our clients.
